

CHILD TRAPS MAN WHO FOOLED HER IN ROBBERY PLOT

Sent After Father, She Detects
"Bud Linke" Leaving Saloon
With Money.

PARENT LURED AWAY.
Telephone Message Leaves Bar
Unattended Save by Girl of Seven.

When Esther Finkelshtain was fooled today and gave a big, bad man a chance to rob her father's cash register, she made up for it by causing his arrest later. She is only seven, and her father, who, according to her lights, is the smartest man in the world, was fooled just as easily as she was.

A minute after the man got her out of her father's saloon at No. 222 Harrison street, Brooklyn, Esther redoubled her efforts. She had a heart to tell her to look around just before she began crossing the street to call her father. And, as they say in Yiddish, "If the heart tells you something, you must obey."

So she looked around and saw the big, bad man, sneaking out of the saloon with a handful of bills. The man saw Esther as soon as she saw him, and began to run. But Esther, even if she is plump, can run faster than any of the little girls on the block, and she ran after the man, crying at the top of her voice until another man, who had just turned the corner, heard her. He spread out his arms and caught the big, bad man, and held him so fast that he hadn't time to drop the bills all crumpled up in his hand before Esther had snatched them away from him.

TELEPHONE MESSAGE LURED FATHER OUT.
And such luck! The captor was Detective Drum of the Miller avenue station, and he recognized the bad man as "Bud Linke," whose real name is William Zelinsky, and who has been in prison often.

Esther's father, Joseph, has no telephone in his saloon, but sometimes his friends and relations call up the clear store across the street and ask that he be sent for. This morning came a message for Finkelshtain.

"Esther, you mind the place, and tell anybody who comes in here that I'll be right back," he admonished the little one as he went out.

"Say, is that you, Finky," said the voice over the phone. "Well, Schmitty has been pinched, and he wants you to come right down and go his bail."

"Which Schmitty?" demanded Finkelshtain.

"Oh, you know Schmitty," said the voice. "Sure you do, the fat little fellow, with the bum lamp."

Finkelshtain didn't know, and the voice at the other end of the wire insisted he did, and they were arguing the thing out when Zelinsky entered the saloon.

"Hey, kid, get me a drink," he growled.

"Please, mister, I don't want sell liquor," said the little one. "I'm too little. Won't you please wait till my father comes back from across the street?"

"No, I'm in a hurry; go call him," Zelinsky growled once more, "and be quick about it."

So, Esther, zealous in her father's interests, started after her papa.

Zelinsky, who the detectives say had planned the thing with one of his pals, lost no time, but went right at the cash register, which contained $2.

Magistrate Fitch held him in $1,000 for the grand jury.

BORROWED PRINTING SHOP TO GIVE GIRL OUTING.

Friend Pilsum Has Chum John Arrested for Carrying Presses Away.

E. R. Pilsum, who has a printing establishment at Nos. 215-219 East One Hundred and Twenty-second street, is an easy-going, good-natured sort of a man, but when he discovered today that his good friend, John Widelf, a toolmaker of No. 222 Bowery, had backed a truck up to his shop and taken away all of his presses, forms, type, stocks and ends and ends of metalware he decided that Chum John had gone a bit too far.

Chum John, according to Detective Enright of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station, who arrested him this afternoon, admitted that he had borrowed Friend Pilsum's plant, but added:

"I didn't think he'd get so hot about it. He wasn't rushed for any work and I just borrowed the stuff temporarily. I needed a bit of change to go down to the Mardi Gras at Coney Island. A lady in the case, you know." This explanation didn't appease Friend Pilsum and Chum John is confined in a narrow cell awaiting arraignment in court to-morrow.

Gov. Dix to Syracuse.
ALBANY, Sept. 13.—Gov. Dix, accompanied by Commander De Kay, left for Syracuse on the 1.40 train this afternoon to attend the State Fair. To-morrow will be Governor's day, and Gov. Dix will deliver the principal address. Friday night he will leave for Spring Lake, N. J., to attend the Governor's conference and deliver an address.

Three new models in Women's Dresses for afternoon and street wear tomorrow at the specially low price of 25.00

Each of these new models is made of satin-finished crepe meteor. Each is more fully, yet briefly, described below. But a gown and a woman's smile are not to be adequately visualized in words. It really will reward your interest to see these trig little dresses. Bordered on severity in design, they are effective with that simplicity which cannot be too generously extolled. And the price of twenty-five dollars is little enough in all conscience.

Model One is a very smart one-piece affair, with set-in kimono sleeves and one large side rever. Has high collar, yoke and jabot of filet lace. Shirred at waist line to produce French coat effect.

Model Two is a charming little dress, whose simplicity is redeemed by silk tapestry around shoulder and at cuffs. The yoke is of figured net lace, so is the high collar. Straight line skirt with loose panel back.

Model Three is a chic little creation, whereof the waist is trimmed with machine-stitched embroidery of contrasting colors. Round collar and cuffs of filet lace. Skirt has stitched panel back and front, faced with contrasting satin.

All models and all sizes, in navy, brown, wistaria, Copenhagen blue, taupe, leather, light blue, pink, as well as black or white.
